MR. O. M. LEWIS PASSES AWAY AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING

Mr. Oscar Mayberry Lewis, who many of the old-timers will remember as a former railroad employee, and who came to Wainwright in 1908, and proved up a homestead in this district in the early days passed away on Monday morning at 8.30 after a lingering illness lasting for the past six years. Senile pneumonia is given as the immediate cause of death.

The deceased, who was born in the state of Indiana in 1854, and was thus 73 years of age was married to Miss Hattie Moon, of Marysville, Miss. some fifty years ago and they lived in that part of the States until coming to Wainwright as stated.

Of that union there were four children two boys and two girls, two of whom are still living. Mrs. Lewis predeceased her husband nearly two years ago.

In addition to homesteading and farming here, the late Mr. Lewis was a fire insurance agent for the old Grand Trunk R.R. for some years, working with it at Bigger and Wainwright. Since his death, he suffered a paralytic stroke and practically since that time he has been under the doctor's care. At times he had short spells of better health, but at a later date, was again stricken, and has been bed-ridden practically since. He bore his suffering with great fortitude and always exhibited pleasure when any of his friends would pay him a visit. For the past week he had been sinking rapidly and the end came very peacefully on Monday when his son Mr. E. (Jack) Lewis of Calgary and daughter Mrs. R. May of Wainwright, who he lived with, were with him at the closing hours of his life.

THE FUNERAL

Was held at the Wainwright United church on Tuesday the pastor Rev. G. Ebyus conducting the first part of the burial service. The brethren of the local lodge of Oddfellows, of which order the deceased was a member nearly forty years, took charge of the solemn portion of the service, with the ceremonies peculiar to that organization after which the remains were taken to the city for interment in the Edmonton cemetery where they will lie beside the body of Mr. Lewis who was buried there two years ago.

McLeod's parlor, had charge of the funeral arrangements and the pallbearers were:

Bros. Montgomery, Carrell, Karman Wilkins, Fuller and Sutherland.

Many beautiful floral tributes and emblems were placed upon the coffin as tokens of sympathy and respect.

WORLD'S CHAMPION PRODUCES NEW SEED WESTERN WHEAT

Experimental work is being carried on by Herman Trelle, the wheat and oat king of the world, with respect to a new strain variety with which he is experimenting and which he hopes will more than equal the famous Marquis wheat which in effect, made wheat growing possible in most of the Canadian West.

Summarized, Mr. Trelle hopes that his experiments will result in a wheat which is not only earlier than Marquis but has a stronger straw, (a notable Marquis fault) a head which will stand a lot of handling before shelling out a general crop which will stand the varied weather and storm conditions usual to our growing period and which ripens so early that frost danger is almost eliminated.

Anyone conversant with wheat growing will admit at once that Mr. Trelle has taken on a big contract. But he seems to have the goods with him, and he can produce what he is hoping for then this country should be so to it that Herman Trelle is duly honored by elevation to our Hall of Fame wherever and whatever that may be. It is a great feat to beat Dr. Sargent Wheeler and Dr. Chase Saunders in producing wheat varieties better than are already in existence. Mr. Trelle just now seems to be Canada's best bet.

His new wheat is not named yet, nor will it be named until such time as sufficient quantities are available for general distribution. A journalistic turn in "Mystery Wheat" but Mr. Trelle makes no mystery about it; he is frankly experimenting and has hopes probably expectations, that his experiments will result in something like the American high yielding wheat.

B.C. TO ADOPT PENSIONS PLAN

OTTAWA—The old-age pensions law enacted at the last session of parliament is going into effect forthwith in British Columbia. An agreement between the Dominion and provincial governments has been signed.

The Pension Act provides for a co-operative arrangement with the different provinces, and the act applies only to such provinces as by legislation elect to go into the scheme on the 50-50 basis. The legislature of British Columbia, at the last session passed such an act, but it is the only province that has.

The agreement now being executed will mean that people in British Columbia of 70 years whose financial condition makes them eligible for a month be entitled to a pension of $20 a month.

REASONS WHY CAR OWNERS SHOULD BE MEMBERS OF A.M.A.

Many inquiries are being received at central offices in Edmonton and Calgary as to the objective and scope of the operation of the recently organized Alberta Motor Association, these requests for information coming from many sections of the province. All of which go to prove that in spite of the best efforts of the A.M.A. executive to broadcast an outline of the club's activities to the general public and interest car owners in the work of the mutual benefit organization, much publicity work is still needed to place the facts before the people.

The Alberta Motor Association is the successor to the automobile clubs of northern and southern Alberta, which were foremost factors in securing constantly improving motor vehicle legislation during the last few years and which brought powerful influence to bear in the province for the improvement of highways and the inauguration of a system of road grading. The provincial association is carrying on the same campaign in a much wider field maintaining tourist camps and information bureaus at Edmonton and Calgary, giving hotel, garage and road services, and in many other ways looking after the interests of members primarily, but providing as well a public service that benefits the province as a whole.

One of the outstanding objectives now engaging the immediate attention of the A.M.A. leaders is the securing of a $500,000 federal grant for Canadian highways and the inauguration of a $100,000 road building campaign in Alberta. Both these objectives are of direct importance to every citizen of the province and, deserve and need the active support of all automobile owners in particular.

Officials of the A.M.A. are not a little proud of the fact that the club thought one of the youngest, has the lowest membership fee of any club of the kind in the world providing equal service, the cost being actually below 2 cents a day though fee towing and mechanical service is given and an official magazine sent monthly to each member.

Seven principal reasons are given by the executive as to why every car owner in the province should be a member of the Alberta Motor Association, all of which are worth pondering over. These are: Free towing service; free mechanical aid; free road information; free maps; better highways; faster development, and a direct and indirect benefit at home and abroad from publicity.

Miss Mabel Bowen left for the city on Friday evening on a visit to her sister there. While away she is the guest of Mrs. H. Wallace this week.

A site for a canning factory has been secured in Edmonton by the Brother Canning Company of New Westminster, B.C., and an early start will be made with the erection of a plant which will can Alberta grown fruits and vegetables.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Mackay and Mr. E. P. Lewis wish to thank their many friends for the kindness and sympathy shown them in their bereavement and for the floral tributes and the sympathy shown during the last illness of the late Mr. Oscar Lewis.

PLAYERS GET NEW LINGO IN MAKING RUNAWAY EXPRESS

Actors are quick to grasp the novelty of new situations and just as Universal City changed its speech from everyday English to the vernacular of the film when "The Still Alarm" was being filmed, now it is in the throes of speaking the lingo of the railroad man.

Unusual pictures are as interesting perhaps more so to the motion picture player as they are to the movie fans. Hence the whole studio took more than passing interest in one of the greatest railroad stories ever pictured "The Runaway Express", a Universal jewel which will come to the theatre Friday and Saturday.

When the company came back from its location trip at "Gaiety, Nevada," where the production was filmed, it brought back with it the speech of the trainman.

Blanche McElroy and Jack Daugherty who play the leading roles in "The Runaway Express" sounded in greater degree than any other member of the cast. Now when Jack indicates that he is on his way to the Studio Inn for luncheon, his destination becomes the "beany". And when Blanche goes to her dressing-room she speaks of it as her "caboose".

Director Seligwick, in the "super" the big stages are "round-houses" the roads and streets in the studio become the "right of way" and the studio reception room is now the "siding".

"The Runaway Express" was adopted to the screen by Curtis Benton from Spearman's book "The Nerve of Foley" which ran into many editions to satisfy that vast army of readers who thrill to tales of the railroad.

REBEKAH LODGE CELEBRATES FOR 76th ANNIVERSARY

In commemoration of the founding of the Rebekah degree of I.O.O.F. 76 years ago, the local lodge held a social evening on Thursday last, and at the invitation of the sisters quite a large number of brothers of the subordinate lodge were on hand to enjoy the festivities.

A musical programme filled one half of the evening while the balance of the time was spent in socializing. Frank Morris was adjudged to be the best "milliner" in the trimming of ladies' hats which provided much merriment, while Bro. R. Dunsmore proved himself almost an academician by taking the prize offered for drawing in fact he took the cake (we mean the back).

A reading by Bro. Morris and instrumental numbers by Bros. F. Stott and H. Ward were much enjoyed. Sis M. Lally acted as accompanist while Bro. T. Lissimore deputized for Sis J. Billings in the chair.

Fox Farming Is Growing Industry In This Province

The number of silver foxes on fox farms in Alberta has doubled during the past year, according to the estimate of H. S. Oulton, Inspector for the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association, who has been looking into conditions in this province. It is the belief of Mr. Oulton that the gross profits from the sale of Alberta raised fox pelts will be more than $500,000, in addition to which there will be a considerable profit from the sale of live foxes from breeding purposes.

Last year there were 3,000 registered foxes in Alberta and it is expected there will be 3,000 more for registration this year. There are 76 registered stock varieties from a few pairs on the smaller places up to 500 pairs on the largest farm, that of Colpitts Bros., near Calgary, Alberta at the present time ranks fourth among the provinces of the Dominion in regard to the size of the fox industry.

The few barrels of crude oil which the Town Council had agreed upon some of our streets during the summer, has surely proved the value of this treatment in road building and now the time is not far distant when all our roads and streets have been done over in the same manner. Many of the American highways, where the oil is cheap are made in this way.

CAMPAIGN IN CANADIAN GOODS MOST SUCCESSFUL

That the "Buy Empire Goods" campaign in Britain was proving an unqualified success and that as a consequence there would be a considerable increase of Canadian goods used in the Old Country was the statement made by W. S. Thompson of Glasgow and London, representative of the Sutherland International Dispatch Company, Limited.

Mr. Thompson stated that British housewives were now acquiring the habit of asking where goods were manufactured and were showing a marked preference for Canadian products.

Conditions in the Old Land, he said were gradually improving although the dog system was still having a general bad effect. The mischief was however that the government could not see how it could be dispensed with.

Mr. Thompson arrived from Vancouver having come to Canada via the Panama. He is returning home by way of Montreal. He stated that British manufacturers had expressed much satisfaction at the crop reports in Western Canada and these were having a most buoyant effect on their prospective output this fall and winter.

PREPARING AT BUFFALO PARK FOR ANNUAL KILLING

The boys at the Buffalo park under the guidance of Bud Cotton have now completed the rounding up of the animals into the big park in preparation for the annual slaughter of the excess animals. This year it is learned that the number to be killed will be in the neighborhood of 1,000.

At present it is not known who will receive the contract for the actual slaughter of the animals although the P. Burns Co. made a very successful job of this work last year.

From reports we learn that the animals killed should all provide some splendid meat, as they are all in first class shape this year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MORE ON THE SCHOOL EXPENSES QUESTION

The Editor—Sir: It is to be regretted that the only apparent result of an effort to arouse public opinion upon a question of national importance should be an attempt on the part of the local school staff to uphold a system which is Victorian in its methods and, far from being in line with the march of Canadian progress in other things, is simply a bad copy of the worst features of the Scottish board school system of 30 years ago, so far as supplies are concerned. In these days of progress one might as reasonably uphold the "slate and the spindle" at champion a system which is as much out of date as the "coat sleeve grater".

Free education is a provincial and national matter. It is not primarily a question for the teacher personally, a parochial matter for the board, or a practical question for the school staff although all these may be affected by it, and may hasten or retard its advent according to their sympathy with it, or their opposition to it.

However, the communication of the local school staff is at least a tacit admission that there is a case to answer and as their statement is likely to make a false impression, I am compelled to give accurate information to the public as to what is required by a seventh grade scholar, and at what cost.

First, it has come as an unpleasant surprise to find that I was far too conservative when I said that it took eight dollars to keep the year's work and I now submit to your readers a detailed list of the supplies that a seventh grade scholar was instructed (continued on page 9)

WORK ON NEW MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL PROCEEDS Apace

Although the weather of the past week has not been anything like propitious for the job, the work at the site of the new Wainwright Municipal hospital is proceeding apace and last week and the architect, Mr. R. Blakey of Edmonton was on the ground looking things over and seeing to it that all is being done as is called for by the contract.

Mr. Toby, the contractor, in speaking of the help required is authority for the statement that so far as is possible local help will be employed on the work, and to this end Mr. A. T. T. is foreman of the job.

At this writing the excavation work has been finished and approved by the architect and the forms for the concrete basement walls are being made and placed. So soon as these are ready work will be commenced on the pouring of the concrete.

The large quantities of building supplies needed—brick, tile, cement, lumber, re-inforcing steel, etc.—is now being delivered to the site and it will be only a matter of days before the site will be the scene of great activity. It is determined that all possible speed is to be exercised to have the building covered in before the real bad weather starts so as to have the job completely finished and available for the public as soon as possible consistent with good workmanship.

The work, which was drilled by the Guthrie boys to a depth of well over two hundred feet, has now been cased in. This has been very thoroughly tested and has been proven to be of ample capacity for the hospital purposes.

CROP REPORT SHOWS RETURNS ARE AS EXPECTED

Practically all wheat in the Prairie Provinces has been cut says the Bank of Montreal crop report and good weather is now required for threshing. In Alberta the yields and grades are coming up to expectation but in Saskatchewan while the yields are average there will be more of the lower grades. In Ontario the crop in Manitoba is poor. In Quebec harvesting and threshing operations are rapidly approaching completion and crops in general are satisfactory. In Ontario threshing operations have been well advanced under favourable weather conditions and yields of the principal crops are good. The crop in Prince Edward Island good weather for harvesting has improved the crop outlook but in Nova Scotia adverse conditions have prevailed over a large area. In British Columbia improved weather conditions have greatly benefited the crop, and the threatened heavy loss has largely been offset.

In the event of the winner being unable to attend, the scholarship will descend to the girl standing second.

STEWART VISITS OLD BATTLEFIELDS THROUGH EUROPE

PARIS—Hon. Charles Stewart, Canadian minister of the interior who flew from Owen to Berlin a few days ago, has arrived in Paris. He visited the French battlefields today. He expects to return to Canada on the Empress of Scotland on October 15.

Mr. Stewart who believes Canada's fuel problem can be solved by increasing the importation of Welsh coal, investigated while in Germany the process of converting low grade coal into oil. He says it has not yet reached the stage of being a commercial success.

The little six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hasett, who farm south of town was taken to the city last week and for a rush operation for appendicitis. She is getting along nicely now.

BUY THIRD SHIPMENT OF HORSES FOR RUSSIA

Good progress has been made by the Horse Buying Commission of the Soviet government in their purchases in this province, according to J. M. Dillon who has charge in Alberta of the buying for the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Buying for the third and last shipment this year will commence on Monday, September 26, at the Half-Way Corral, south of Gen. On Wednesday inspection will be held at Harry Walsh's corral on the Bow River south of Bassano, and in the course of the next two weeks the Russian buyers will be at Elide Bros' corral North-west of Brooks; Doc. Giffin's corral, south of Brooks on the Bow River; W. D. McLellan's corral, north of Brooks; and on the Indian Reserve at Gleichen.

BRITISH PAPER PUBLISHES INTERVIEW PREMIER BROWNLEE

That Premier Brownlee during his recent visit to Great Britain was well received by the press of that country and succeeded in telling of many of the splendid opportunities available in Canada is evidenced by copies of papers which have been received in the past few days and which contain interviews with the premier.

The following interview appeared in the Wiltshire Times of Trowbridge on August 26, under the heading "Canada: The Land of Opportunity. Two persons to the Square Mile."

After six weeks' visit to the home country and Europe, Mr. J. E. Brownlee, premier of Alberta, Canada started back to Edmonton the capital of the province. In an interview Mr. Brownlee expressed the view that in the immediate future Canada as a whole and Alberta in particular would start on a tremendous forward movement of progress. Alberta covers an area of 225,000 square miles or more than twice the size of the British Isles. But at present it has a population of under 650,000 or little more than two persons to the square mile, compared with 380 to the square mile in the British Isles.

"I am convinced," Mr. Brownlee said, "that we are on the eve of great developments of our natural resources and we want British people and British capital to participate in that prosperity. The economic conditions in the Dominion are as good if not better than they have been in its history and we are today facing a period of very definite development and expansion, especially in Alberta where it can honestly be said that we have a little more to offer than other provinces in the Dominion."

Mr. Brownlee said that the English market for 1927 was a good one. English wool from 1 pound 10 shillings to 3 pounds per acre and improved land from 4 pounds to 10 pound per acre, according to the improvements—house farm buildings, and land under cultivation. Farms average about 320 acres. Immigrants are flocking in, but unfortunately the percentage of British subjects is extremely low. Settlers are coming from Central Europe and the United States, and these people make not only good citizens, but, in due course excellent citizens. The majority take out naturalization papers. Farmers are coming in from the United States because of the great increase there in land values. In Alberta, they find rich and fertile lands at from a seventh to a tenth of the price demanded in America."

Sisters of the Rebekah degree I.O.O.F. are reminded of the meeting to-morrow night when the degree will be conferred and the amalgamation will be conducted by the D.D.P. Refreshments will be served.

Mr. David Bacon, of Kinnoult, Ont. who has been visiting his aunt Mrs. Arthur Martin of City View farm, left for Edmonton on Saturday to visit friends there. He will also visit at other places while in the west.

HEAVY GROWTH INCREASES DANGER FROM FIRE HARM

Anticipating danger from large fires as a result of the heavy forest and prairie growth this year the provincial department of agriculture has launched a campaign urging care in the prevention of fires. Large posters printed with red ink have been prepared and will be placed in conspicuous places throughout the province warning people that violation of the Prairie Forest Act are punishable in addition to liability to civil action, with fines up to $200 and costs.

Attention is particularly drawn to the fact that it is unlawful to kindle a fire and permit it to run at large; to kindle or be party to kindling a fire for camping or branding purposes and leave it unextinguished; to kindle a fire for the purpose of clearing land or to burn stubble or brush unless the land on which the fire is started is properly fire-guarded and watched during the whole period of its continuance. Before May 1 a fire-guardsman is not less than 1 foot in width and after that date it must not be less than 20 feet in width. It is also unlawful for any one to refuse without lawful excuse to proceed to extinguish a fire when ordered to do so by a fire guard.

In connection with the last clause of the act, persons more than 16 years of age and under 65 other than postmasters, physicians, railway station agents, telegraph, brakemen, firemen or trainmen while on duty, residing within 10 miles of a prairie fire or 25 miles of a forest fire shall proceed with all reasonable dispatch to any fire when ordered to do so by a fire warden and they shall take with them hoses and implements and any available fire extinguishing appliances if requested to do so.

Don't Tell The Wife

Copyright 1926 Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

by

WILLIAM S. COURTNEY

"DON'T TELL THE WIFE" starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture adaptation of this novel

Joan a slight flush on her satiny cheeks was not alone of the fresh wind's making was listening with downcast eyes to Abner's unflinching talk. The arid in Abner's eyes, the boyed drip of his words were as plain and as potent to Ranny as red flannel shirts to pasture bulls.

To this flaunting of illicit bliss, Ranny's poignant reaction, following the normal way of all male flesh, divided itself into two spaces.

The first, a madness to bury his fingers in Abner's throat, and presently float over a subsiding circle on the water marking the spot where Abner's body went down. The only sign of that spasm was a nervous clenching and opening of his powerful hands.

The second impulse, in due course was a cynical searching of his mind and soul as to whether or not he really cared.

After all, there were other flowers in the social garden.

Joan was a chrysanthemum. He had always loved to think of her as a strong, straight, supple chrysanthemum a great white flower, decking the glories of autumn conservatories.

But here at hand was an orchid pale, aesthetic, fragile flower Mrs. Clara Clemenceau in all her blonde bloom. Truly her cheeks were petals her arms soft tendrils, he noted, festooning his eyes upon her.

Clare grew conscious suddenly of his intensely personalized gaze, his intimate, interested inspection.

Surprised, delighted, she flushed with inner satisfaction—a faint tint diffused over her creamy cheeks and shoulders.

"You are very beautiful," whispered Ranny.

He folded a coppery hand over her slender fingers. He noticed that these were warm, vibrant a living vibration that trembled preciously upon her lips, her nostrils, and glinted in her eyes.

He had never suspected so deep a passion in so frail a flower.

Livingstone Stinner, turning impatiently from a desultory chat with an arid dwager, fumed inwardly at the spectacle of his especially marked fair prey breaking ardent lances in an eye-joust with another champion.

Stinner was a man given to quick and effective decisions. He decided after an indignant glance at Clara and Ranny and a quizzical inspection of Abner and Joan that a cool sea bath would be a most effective damper to certain hot bloods.

"Before the sun goes down let's leave to and take a swim!" he proposed.

"It's too cold!" said Joan positively.

"Nonsense! The water temperature in October hasn't changed a whit from the summer mean. It will be invigorating. Just what—we all need."

"But none of us brought bathing suits Mr. Livingstone," curiously objected a fateful man.

Clare took command of the situation in her languid, yet strangely dominating way.

"Livingstone, you old dear, that's a ducky suggestion—no pun intended. As for suits—pull! Away out here who's to command?"

Clare paused and in an arch, daring smirk.

"You immoral little vixen," giggled a matron, "I never heard anything so wild. You wouldn't dare think of suggesting it except that you know you have the best figure in our set."

Clare smiled faintly, gratified at the mock horror she had stirred up amongst the women, the genuine shock she had caused the men. But gratified most by the black look she felt Joan casting upon her.

Ah life was sweet! And she had not really said a thing.

Stinner stroked that that style give way to utility upon "Clare means of course," he grinned the brim deep. I've an ample supply of the very latest cut one piece bathing suits—mostly cut! If you'll all go to your rooms I'll have the steward pass out the suits—and no questions asked. It will be a bully lark. Let's go. The last one in is an old sea cow!"

He chanted exuberantly, thus demonstrating that the richer and rasher some men get the closer they return under the skin to first boyish principles.

"Livingstone be yourself!" chided Clare, moving off so languidly that her warning seemed to arise naturally from a foreboding that she would win the nomination with which Stinner had playfully threatened the slothful.

A gift for giving misleading impressions, however, was but another of the qualities of Clare's art. As a matter of fact, she was the first to reappear upon the deck, though her manner was no less languid than before.

Joan gave no suggestion—by quickened breath, or color, or otherwise—that she had hastened her actions one iota.

"Guess she didn't have much to take off," giggled Mrs. Telfen under her breath, to Joan.

"Certainly she has very little on!" rejoined Joan. "How is it her suit is so much more extreme than those of the rest of us? I thought Mr. Stinner had provided a standard lot."

Livingstone Stinner himself was wondering just that as, coming on deck with Ranny and Clara, his astonished eyes fell upon what was at that moment the common object of the stares of guests and crew alike.

"Clare," ejaculated Stinner, glaring at where a ragged remnant of swimming suit leg, like a scalloped necklace, demurely clung to the zenith of a creamy thigh, "you hussey, who ripped your suit?"

"Oh, Livingstone, it isn't ripped. You know how I just have to look like everyone else. So I merely took some scissors and did a little trimming. The legs were too long anyhow—and the neck too tight!"

"Scandalous!" thought Dowager Telfen audibly.

A general laugh followed. The men admired, the women envied, Clare's daring.

She turned a bashfully reproachful and hurt look upon Mrs. Telfen then appealed to Ranny from under the golden curtains of her lashed eyes.

"Ranny, you think it's perfectly nice and proper, don't you?"

Ranny's head had been swimming with the eye-filling picture. Clare made standing there on the forward deck, her slender, yet rounded and firmly fashioned limbs—like some fine old turnings of lathe masters' art—looking pathetically inadequate to withstand the searching breeze.

All the other women—and men too—wore heavy sweaters draped carelessly over their shoulders. Not so Clare. Her only protection against the autumnal nipping of the Sound winds was the curled red jersey swimming suit.

Ranny more than anything else in the world at that moment felt a yearning impulse in his fundamental masculine protectiveness—a cryingaching urge to clasp that soft little body up in his bronzed, hairy arms, to shield those tiny feet from contact with the gross boards of the deck.

However, catching Joan's eyes upon him, as she beligerently awaited his answer to Clare's plaintive inquiry, Ranny decided with great self-sacrifice that it might not be wise to publicly humor his many impulses.

But he wet his lips, gritted his teeth and summoned enough independence to assert emphatically:

"I think it's just ador-able—er—very sensible, Mrs. Clemenceau. You know one's limbs should be—ah, unimpeded for the best results in athletic diversions."

"Dear man!" lisped Clare, twisting up to Ranny with wintry, tigerishly graceful undulations of her hips.

Clare had what is known in the parlance of the theatrical world as "stage presence"—an instinctive dramatic trick of capitalizing attention, and focusing it upon her merest words and actions.

She worked the gift to its utmost in that moment. She made sure that Joan and everyone was watching her before she whispered, soft and low to Ranny:

"I just adore men who have the courage of their own—hiking!"

Ranny, staring with deep concern into those limpid firepools of eyes felt that he was beginning to "just love" their owner.

Despite the intensity of his feeling against Abner and Joan he was beginning to grow abstracted in that matter.

While his open eyes and shamed flirtation with Clare, which was originally meant as a means to an end in his campaign of vengeance was beginning to collect heartless dividends on his emotions!

CHAPTER VII

Captain Marty Wales was a Maine man born and bred. Social graces do not accrete naturally to the genuine lean and old fashioned brand of "down-t-hummers," whose eyes are adjusted to the far horizons of open seas rather than to the forested ones of drawing rooms, and whose hands grow red and coarse of winters hauling up lobster traps.

Despite his derivation, however, there was a positive quality of manly gentility about Captain Marty, with his ramrod back and his six-foot-three frame of two hundred hard pounds, that fitted him eminently well to the bridge of a gentleman's yacht.

Yea, even to the bridge of the finest and most fastidious gentleman's yacht afloat, the Speedwell of Livingstone Stinner.

When he caught a signaled order from Stinner to nose the Speedwell toward a sandy spit of beach and drop anchor, there was a regal gesture in the manner in which he touched his cap in salute that seemed to distinguish him as owner instead of employee.

More, there was, no end of diddled and derision plainly visible in Captain Marty's mien and voice as he surveyed the scantily clad society folk waiting upon the forward deck for him to leave the yacht to so that they might dive and swim.

Many times during his career on the billiard table, yachts, had Captain Marty seen bizarre escapades which he could overlook, or merely smile about in his remote way. But so blue nosed man from Maine could be expected to observe with equanimity people going to swimming on an autumn day.

A man of many thoughts, but few words that was Captain Marty. To his first mate now he grunted:

"Natty bunch! The old ones even more'n the young ones. The gals as plumb silly as the men!"

The first mate was as dry as the fish on the sun racks in the little Nova Scotia town of Lunenburg, from which he hailed. He grunted:

"You can't tell 'em apart from here! Men or women—which is which!"

Now the Speedwell's engines were stopped and she swung gently on a flood tide from her chains, while Captain Marty and his mate hung over the bridge to shiver and marvel at the spectacle of grown men and women carrying on like boys and girls diving and splashing about in the water which according to Captain Marty's own way of looking at it, wouldn't 'of been 'no Turkish bath for a polar bear!"

Stinner had counted upon the plunge to arrest a further development of heat in certain rather young bloods.

He had expected, too, a chance to gain the undivided attention of Clare away from Ranny.

He had planned to teach her to swim, for he was sure that she could not swim. Who ever heard of a lipping blonde widow who could swim?

Livingstone Stinner was proud of the sturdy breast stroke that remained with him as a heritage of the naked days of his skinny youth in North-west lumbering rivers.

But when he came to look for her, Clare, the weak and languishing, was comparing crawl stroke technique with Ranny and easily outdistancing even that athletic chap as she clove the pearly water like a butter spreader.

Stinner was so sore that he involuntarily swallowed several mouthfuls of briny water—mistakes in themselves, which are not calculated to improve a testy rich man's temper.

Whose yacht and whose party was this anyhow?

He had brought the widow for his very own, and here was Forbes stealing her away from under his very nose.

Stinner had too much money and too grand a social and business position to be accustomed to the experience of having fond desires, whisked out of his hands.

He breathed maledictions upon Ranny and wished he had not invited him. It did not seem to be enough that Ranny had lost him a cool fifty thousand on that polo game. He must cheat him of his woman, too.

Wanted to make a business deal with him, did he? Hah! Ranny would be lucky if he met him, Livingstone Stinner again.

Clay Varick read Stinner's mind. Clay was adept at mind reading. No woman had ever been able to make

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

The epidemic—if it can be called such—of infantile paralysis appears to be on the point of subsiding in this province. According to news items in the daily press, one or more expert medical men have stated, no doubt with perfect truth that infantile paralysis, in one form or another is always with us, but appears in a more or less virulent form about every four years, says an exchange.

This is in line with the known facts of other forms of disease such as small-pox, etc. These exist somewhere all the time but every so often take on the form of an epidemic. The germ of infantile paralysis is said to be isolated by these experts an antitoxin is presumably on the point of discovery.

Infantile paralysis in its virulent form, is a dreadful thing. Death follows most cases and where death does not come, the victim is either crippled physically or mentally or both. There are many cases, however, where the attack is mild and leaves no apparent ill results.

Whether a mild panic over epidemics of this kind is quite justified is a debatable matter. Candidly, the Observer believes that the provincial panic over infantile paralysis stepped over the mark usually set for hysterical stuff. We doubt if a single case of infantile paralysis was prevented by the drastic measure of closing schools, clapping the ban on public meetings and in general, acting as if death was about to meet us, or our, round the next corner.

At the same time we are not criticizing those responsible for taking such measures for the public safety. On the contrary we would have done exactly the same thing under the same circumstances whether we believed the action efficacious or not. There is always a point where one's private opinion must be submerged in the general public opinion of safety.

THE FIRE HAZARD

It is truly a timely warning which has issued from the provincial department as found in another column this week.

At this season the fire hazard is without doubt at its greatest, and the many places which the wonderful growth of the past summer has left choked with tall and thick weeds are a little less than a menace to safety. A carelessly thrown match or smokers' stub in such circumstances may well prove ruinous to buildings in the vicinity.

In the burning of the many piles of garden rubbish at this time of year our citizens cannot exercise too much caution to see that all fire is kept under full control, and at this time also the gloves and chimneys should receive such attention as will ensure that these will not prove a fire trap during the winter when of necessity they are worked the hardest.

NANCY NASH GOT POINTERS FROM HITCHCOCK

Although he has had comparatively little screen experience himself, Asymmetrical Hitchcock experienced keen pleasure in giving advice to a less player at Fox Films West Coast Studio during the filming of "Upstream" showing at the Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

Hitchcock playing the exaggerated role of a star boarder in a New York boarding house, observed that Miss Nash, although seemingly composed, was decidedly nervous. Under the surface she was fighting a fear that only those who have faced a motion picture camera for the first time can understand. She was self-conscious and knew it for this was her second big effort before that terrible realist, the camera!

From this time forward, Hitchcock made it his business to encourage Miss Nash. He told her of his own feelings when years ago, he faced his first crucial tests on the legitimate. He gave her the benefit of odds and ends of advice cautioning her against thinking too much about herself in innumerable little tete-a-tetes he helped Nancy iron out her difficulties. Then someone told him how kind he was. "Not at all," said Hitchcock. "We owe a professional debt and the young

Prices quoted as being unchanged. Saskatoon price advanced 2c during week. BUTTER—Prices are holding up steady in province. Few cars being shipped each week to the coast where market is fairly active. New Zealand receipts there have not been large enough yet to affect Alberta deliveries but this will undoubtedly occur soon as further shipments from New Zealand are expected from now on. ARE PARENTS PEOPLE

ARTICLE ONE

(Published by arrangement with Canadian Social Hygiene Council)

1. Does the present-day parent compare favorably or unfavorably with the parent of past generations?
2. To what extent can parents be blamed for juvenile delinquency?
3. Can a parent by controlling environment and companionship, mould the character of the child as desired?

4. Do you believe in the principle of parent education? If so, what should it include?
5. At what age do you think parent education should start? Should it be before or after marriage?
6. Do you think the inclusion of health as a major topic in a parent education scheme might do much to increase the physical well-being of the country?

BY JUDGE EMILY F. MURPHY

Police Magistrate, Edmonton, Alberta
I have nearly been forced to give up educating parents. The good ones don't need education and with others I am beginning to feel that the only thing which will have marked my effort is to put them under a bond or make them pay a fine.

1. It is safer to say they compare favorably. Honestly, I don't know!

2. The question is too wide a one to answer casually and is too varied in its aspects.

3. This question may be more easily answered by saying: Produce good parents if you want good children.

4. Every hour and every incident is educative to all of us—parents included. The trouble seems to be that many parents fail to make use of their education. They just won't.

5. A girl's education starts with her doll and for the most part continues up to her marriage. (The same does not apply to boys. They get practically no training for parenthood.)

6. It is all right to educate parents—if you can—but I am doubtful of it. Tell us they ought to be educated and see how we will object. The same thing happens when you tell a foreigner he should be "Canadianized" or a western broncho that he must be "tamed." The thing has to be done by stealth if you are to succeed. But it should be attempted by all means.

SEASON'S WHEAT CROP IS SMALL IN MANITOBA

WINNIPEG—A wheat yield of 35,000,000 bushels is forecast for the province of Manitoba by the provincial department of agriculture in its report.

More than 99 per cent of the crop is cut, the report states and about one half of the threshing completed.

The oat crop of the province is declared to be very disappointing as from late in July the crop has been rusty and the grain so light that thousands of fields will never be threshed.

It is estimated by the department that there will be an average yield of wheat around the 16-bushel mark.

This year's wheat average is said to be the smallest in the last 25 years.

HENRY FORD'S BROTHER DIES SUDDENLY, DETROIT

DETROIT—John Ford 62, a brother of Henry Ford died suddenly of heart disease at Fordson, a suburb here.

Mr. Ford, a real estate dealer, president of the Fordson city council, and a member of the Michigan state fair board, was en route home from a council meeting when he was stricken.

He left his automobile, entered the house, he recently purchased and died there.

Making A Convenience Of A Business

Many there are who make of a legitimate and well-established business nothing but a convenience—a place from which to get odds and ends when there is no time to go farther afield. They do not hesitate to send their good money away for many things they need, and which could just as satisfactorily and much more promptly be supplied by their home merchants and dealers. No business, no matter of what nature, can long exist on this sort of patronage. Nor is it fair to expect that it should. The public expect to receive services as and when they demand it; but many do not do their part in making this possible.

There are manufacturing industries with fairly complete equipment which, because of such lack of consideration are idle much of the time. It must be patent to all that a busy plant can operate much more cheaply than one which is working only on part time. Therefore it should be the policy of all to place their business of whatever kind it may be with the local plant or factory to the end that it may be kept reasonably busy and thus be in a position to give its best service.

When it is printed matter of any kind, remember the plant and equipment of

"I'll tell you why I'm going to buy a Westinghouse—"

"Looking back over the past 25 years, I found less than 20% of all automobile manufacturers have stood the test of time and are in business today."

The radio industry is undergoing an identical process of elimination and I'm going to buy my radio from a manufacturer with many years' experience, unlimited resources and assured permanence in the business.

Westinghouse built the electrical apparatus that provides the profits for our business by keeping our machinery working year in and year out. They are pioneers in the radio business and have a wonderful reputation to maintain. They take no chances. Our company doesn't either—and neither will I—so you'll hear the latest Westinghouse model the next time you come up to the house."

We will gladly demonstrate the 1928 Westinghouse models and explain the many improvements that make them better.

DON'T TELL THE WIFE

up her mind to engineer a proposal out of Clay that he had been telepathically warned in advance of her nefarious designs.

Forecasted foreman—and thus a jolly bachelor forever.

Clay stroked over to Ranny, who treading water on the outskirts of the swimming group, was feasting his eyes upon the delectable picture Clare made as she exhibited for his edification certain postures of floating which she had learned and acquired at the Lido.

A gold and cream feather was Clare upon the fortunate water.

"Idiot!" spluttered Clay when he passed alongside Ranny. "You are messing things up in fine shape. Stivner's over there, giving you looks black and bold enough to sink anyone with a less thick hide than yours! Abner and Joan feel they have carte blanche so long as you act as you do with this blonde. In short, we came out here to set a trap for your wife—and you have crawled into one your own making and pulled it in after you!"

"Don't spit in my ear," chided Ranny. "I've just begun to live!"

Clay who weighed two hundred and fifty pounds in his B.V.D.'s put a ham of a hand on Ranny's head, forced him under water and sat on him until the indignant Clare raised over and scratched him away with her tiny hands.

Stivner seeing that the purpose of the swimming interlude has miscarried, decided that in perpetual variety of action there was hope and, clambering upon deck below to his guests a summons to come abroad and dress for dinner.

"It's unhealthful to stay in the water more than fifteen minutes when it's chilly," he explained.

"Dear, dear," complained Clare putting one graceful little hand on Ranny's shoulder, allowing him to play tugboat to her until they reached the gangway. "I didn't think were in fifteen seconds!"

She turned on her back to float and watch Joan swimming easily and sturdily in her straight forward way side by side with Abner as they returned from a tugboat excursion to the sandy beach.

Clare's long lashes drooped not altogether with the dewy freight of water drops upon them. She waited until Joan was abreast of her. Then:

"You know," she called, ostensibly up to Stivner again in answer to his summons, but really for Joan's ears. "I could stay forever in the water near Ranny without feeling the cold. He's better than axle grease or steam heat. There must be something in

And Clare rolled her great big eyes very knowingly all the wisdom and a lot of felicitous and feminine from the cat of Rubastes and E. e. were in the sly wink in which one lid fluttered down and up softly, like a patchwork jade covering and uncovering a luminous window.

Night had tucked a sable shroud over the uneasy seaway. A blue-black gauze, pinned to the top of the universe by stars, arched tautly overhead; its ends lost in the dark voids of the horizon.

The wind had freshened and wisps of clouds scudded in low from the east, telltale forerunners of stormy legions to come.

The Speedwell sailing silently along under full headway again was beginning to feel the influence of the boisterous Cape.

Sometimes after midnight the boat yacht would veer south and slip out to the open sea, between towering Montank light on the starboard and Lonely Black Island in port. That was the sailing plan.

Braced on the bridge against the increasing night, Captain Marty cocked a weatherwise Maine eye upon the be-spangled heavens instead of the message of the salty winds and 'lowed to the mate that it's going to blow up a bit tonight.

"Small difference to that bunch, blow high low low," grunted the mate. "Two hours more, the way they're steamin' up now, and they won't know whether we're comin' or goin' or whether y'e in Davy Jones' locker. Well, if it kicks up too smart we kin stay offshore an' ride it out. Do that crowd good to get shaken up a bit."

Captain Marty glanced aft and grunted.

"Rumbles and clack of dinner revelry came from the brilliantly illuminated lounge deck, which was doted now at the side by sliding glass partitions that had been noiselessly adjusted by the moon-faced steward to shield delicate bare shoulders from the chilly night air.

Livingstone Stivner and his guests had dressed formally for dinner. The Speedwell was that kind of a yacht.

It was a resplendent scene. By the wizardry of the suave steward and his In mid-summer temperature, the Speedwell's lounge often served this efficient assistants, coupled with the ingenious mechanisms of the luxurious fittings, the lounge had been converted for all intents and purposes into a palatial secondary dining room dual role while unclosed to the air, but just such occasions as this, when there was a bit too much rest in the breeze, it could be virtually enclosed like a huge conservatory.

It was merely to humor a very rich man's idea of a lark and not because of any lack of dining room proper that the lounge was sometimes so used. The real dining room—a deck below, with its walnut paneled walls and open fire place and gorgeous tapestries and genuine antique Italian renaissance furniture, was known as the finest dining room afloat in the world. It had cost Livingstone Stivner many hundreds of thousands of dollars, that dining room—the income from many acres, and many deals.

Tonight it had contributed only its silver service, the sheen of its crystal and glass, and the majesty of its napery to the dinner.

These with the flowers and potted plants, indigenous to that lounge deck formed a colorful background for the glittering evening gowns and bare shoulders, back and bosom flesh of the women for the Tuscan dress of the men.

Matinee Ladies

STROPHES

Bob Ward, poor college student, working on a dancing partner for rich women, falls in love with Sally Smith, a cigarette girl. She warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habes of the roadhouse, who finds her "charlie" in "hunting" her, who, however, treats her. She offers him free use of her secret apartment. Bob quarrels with Sally over her offer, and leaves in a huff to go to Mrs. Hammond. Repenting, he returns to Sally's house, only to find she has gone to a solid party with Mammon, a rival.

At certain frequent intervals these more or less undraped living statues came magically to life, and displayed very good form as waitresses.

Masie and her intimates of the regal circle of queen gold-diggers were the accredited dancing partners for the twelve best clubmen. But at these off-the-circuit moments, as the party grew mellower and into a more friendly and informal mood, one or more of the twelve best clubmen would bubble over with uncontrollable democracy and playfulness, and grab one of the status for a few frivolous stunts.

Masie, who was a most tolerant person where the idiosyncrasies of the twelve best clubmen were concerned, would usually indulge in a variety with her quaint and en-

"I never expected to meet a girl like you at Masie's party!"

gaging little manner of prying the gay clubman loose from the cot, and saying, "Be yourself, J. Van Pierpont, or Masie spunk!"

After which the party proceeded hilariously, the ruffled statue rearranged her seventh and only remaining veil, and Masie returned her solicitous attention to her guests, notably Sally and Tom Magdon.

Poor little Sally Smith, for all her bird of paradise finery, had remained a timid canary, obviously out of her normal life in this New York apartment aviary. Masie, Leonard and Masie, no doubt, his face gradually focused down to one face again as his eyes feasted upon the pure and lovely countenance and form of little Sally Smith. He leaned even closer, as he asked, with an undertone of intense eagerness.

"I wonder if you'd be quite as willing to do anything I asked you to do, little girl?"

Aldrich was not a man accustomed to the need of sounding out any human being, any girl especially, as to their readiness to humor his desires. He had always known full well that the magic of his name and financial power made every man eager to be his sycophant, every woman eager to be his darling. However, here was one woman about whom he could not feel any such assurance. The phenomenon interested, even thrilled him. She was not an altogether desirable little vixen, too! This fresh beauty, this unpolished likeness to a flower, the innocence—

—Jove! she was worth a room full of Masie!

It was Masie and also out here, and Sally felt that this great man's interest in her imposed upon her an unusual responsibility to be possible.

"Of course," she stated, a little thickly, but primly polite, "I'd try to do anything you wanted me to do, Mr. Aldrich."

STROPHES

Little comedy-dancer head swim with the marvel of it and the terrifying realization that he had been starting at her almost ever since she had arrived; staring good-naturedly, but with pointed intent.

"Well, he wants a special introduction to you. Get that, dearie? Ain't a girl in this country tonight but whose heart would jump up against her back teeth to have HIM ask to meet her?"

Sally could not answer as to how other girls' hearts would jump. But for her own part she was suffering a most decided knocking together of her divided little knees as she saw the great dancer approaching.

Arlington, meet my little friend, Miss Sally Smith. She's about the only cutie you'll ever meet here who won't ask you for a diamond bracelet a minute after she's said, "Pleased to meet you!"

Masie laughed loudly at her own frank joke. As Masie always did, Arlington Aldrich, Esquire, retained from giving his usual appreciative chuckle at Masie's wit.

For Arlington Aldrich, at the impetuous convulsions of the mints and vaults of all nations would open and reveal their stored riches to the cold stare of the Sully Smith's hair, the blue treasure of her eyes.

Masie marched Tom Magdon to a gay, cotter in the corner of the room, giving him all of a flutter, and moving in an incredible dream—from which she might expect to wake up any moment and learn that she had fallen out of bed—sautering off to the roof garden conservatory of Masie's top floor apartment, guided by the firm, strong hand that could sign a check for a thousand dollars without making a blot.

Found herself, presently, seated across a heated table from the great financier, while a living statue, temporarily not standing, served them lemon drinks in tall, thin tumblers.

Still in a daze, hardly knowing what she was doing, Sally mechanically raised her glass, against which Aldrich clinked his, and sipped the beverage. It was a sweetish, confusing drink. It burned her throat, gave her the shuffles, and made her feel suddenly warm. The lights and the murmuring night noises of Manhattan—the taxi-cabs, twenty stories below, grow remote.

Aldrich's face, big and bony, like those grotesque close-ups in the movies where they wanted to register something fearsome, was now over the table towards her. His lips were forming words that seemed to come out of the air, some place high above.

"I never expected to meet a girl like you at Masie's party!" he declared.

"Oh, dear," remarked Sally quite irresolutely, looking at the indistinct face in front of her. "I don't think I should have taken that drink!"

"By Jove," said the Big Face, which was curiously changing into a face of three, six and nine faces. "I really believe you've never had a drink before. This is really the first time I have known a way which meant that it was just the right place for her so long as she was the most beautiful girl that drink then, Masie!"

"Because," said Sally in her naive honesty, "I thought you wanted me to!"

Aldrich chuckled—the kind of a chuckle that sounds a warning in virtuous ears, even when the owner of the ears may be a bit belated. His face gradually focused down to one face again as his eyes feasted upon the pure and lovely countenance and form of little Sally Smith. He leaned even closer, as he asked, with an undertone of intense eagerness.

"I wonder if you'd be quite as willing to do anything I asked you to do, little girl?"

Aldrich was not a man accustomed to the need of sounding out any human being, any girl especially, as to their readiness to humor his desires. TENTH FORTNIGHTLY CROP REPORT

The delay in harvesting and threshing operations occasioned by the fall of rain last week end will be very slight and with a continuance of the present favorable weather, work will be resumed within a few days, according to reports reaching the Department of Agriculture. The snowfall was heavier over the western third of the province, but sun and wind are rapidly drying stocks and little damage to crops in the field is anticipated.

Cutting of wheat had been practically completed over the province by the middle of the past week and rapid progress was being made in harvesting coarse grains. Lodging has occurred in some fields as a result of the snowfall, and this will delay the completion of cutting in some cases. A good start had been made in threshing in a number of districts and some exceptionally good yields have been reported. Most of the wheat threshed so far is grading No. 2 and No. 3 Northern, but the percentage of tough grain being marketed is sufficient to justify a warning to farmers not to be unduly anxious to thresh before stocks have dried thoroughly.

In the south eastern part of the province the weather has been threatening rain did not stop threshing and good progress is being made. In central and northern sections work was completely tied up but present indications point to a resumption of threshing operations about Wednesday. In the Grande Prairie, Peace River and Spirit River districts work is expected to be general again by the middle of the present week.

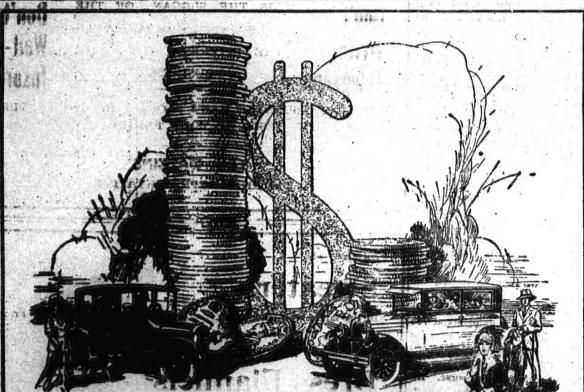

Little difficulty is reported in securing sufficient labour to handle the crop and threshing machines are plentiful throughout the province so that with favorable weather little time will be lost in putting Alberta's record crop into marketable shape.

Making the Canadian Dollar Go Farther than Ever Before

IN the purchase of the common commodities of life, the Canadian dollar has decreased in value during the past decade.

But, in the purchase of an automobile, the dollar is now worth one hundred to two hundred per cent more than it was even ten years ago—is worth more, in fact, than ever before in history.

While constantly raising the quality standard of its products, General Motors of Canada has increased the purchasing power of the Canadian car-buyer's dollar.

... by the economies of volume purchasing and production,
... by the close co-ordination of resources and facilities,
... by improved labor- and time-saving methods of manufacture,
... by sharing with Canada the savings effected by increased production.

In quality and in value, the Canadian dollar now goes farther than ever before in the purchase of a General Motors car.

Messrs. R. Blakey and J. Toby, the architect and contractor for the new hospital were in town over the week end in connection with their duties.

Mrs. W. Isaged has now returned to her home in Vancouver B.C. after visiting her sister Mrs. W. Huntingford on her road home from England.

Mr. G. Black who has been dental mechanic for Dr. Courcier left last week for Red Deer.

Mr. Doug Brown former accountant at the Montreal, was in town over the week end from Donald He was the guest of Dr. Wallace while here.

The big argument will be settled on October 24th and 25th when the Dempsey Tunney pictures will be shown at the local theatre. Better than a $40 ringside seat. Save the date.

The next thing to think of is Christmas, and we are showing a splendid new line of Private Greeting Cards at The Star office. These are some of the finest sample cards we have seen.

As will be noted by a notice elsewhere in this issue Dr. Wallace, the medical health officer has raised the ban on school closing, etc. The kiddies therefore can prepare to again enjoy (1) their schooling on Monday morning next at 9 a.m.

(The harvest thanksgiving service in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian church will be held at 7.30 p.m. on Sunday next when all are welcome. Donations of farm produce will be thankfully received on Saturday afternoon at the church or manse.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Minot McLeod is laid up with an attack of quinsy and wish him better.

Old-timers in the person of the Johnson Bros are in town for a few days visiting at the home of their sister Mrs. Carman Coleman.

We supplied all the barn fixtures for the new barn for Mr. Roy and can give you prices that beat the world on such a building. Drop in and talk this over if you are going to build a barn or fix the old one up. Joe Welch at the Atlas yard Phone 57; you'll save money.

It is very pleasing to note that Secretary Treasurer Pawling while "sitting at the receipt of customers" during the month of September has taken in something over twenty thousand dollars for this year's taxes. The ten per cent discount period expired on Monday last, but all payments on current taxes during October will be discounted five per cent; and the money's worth saving.

There are quite a lot of reports of the "fence going south". This may or may not be a bad sign from the weather point of view, but we know of several sportsmen who are anxious to stop the flight of some of the travellers.

Now, Sir, this may not be the "The house that Jack built" but it is the account that I have paid, and together with the letter of the staff it calls for some comment, and I would ask you to note the following:

The Canadian Reader said by the Staff to be supplied free "in each case" by the Department is not actually supplied "in each case" for one scholar has not yet been supplied although here since the first of January. In my first letter no teacher was blamed for anything; and in a country that is being populated from other countries the burden of two years' supplies in one year will always have to be faced. If experience has shown that public school pupils are unable to handle loose leaf note books satisfactorily why is a loose leaf note book demanded? I leave it to your readers to scan this list of supplies and decide if all possible economy is practiced in the interests of the parents. The minister of education admitted to me personally that the department made a profit last year in supplying books to the boards and teachers, and when it is remembered that the publisher must have his profit and the authors must have their royalty, there is little evidence of economy in the system.

In other districts of Alberta the schools boards have arranged to purchase the books from the department at cost. Why is it not done here? In the list of supplies given by the school staff, 13 exercise books at the cost of one dollar is given as the requirement of a grade seven scholar but my information is that the scholar was instructed to purchase 21 at the cost of two dollars and ninety cents, and that the scholar decided to reduce the number by two, making the amount $2.70. Two pencils are necessary to save the scholar from a penalty of "a hundred lines" if a pencil needs to be sharpened in the school house. Is there no ink supplied free to the school? If there is, who uses it? If the supply is insufficient, is it an evidence that rigid economy is practised as I said, when it is in the interests of the authorities. I feel confident that the Staff know quite well that the time ever comes when the Alberta department of education supplies all the stationary free to the pupils as is done in many other countries, the cheese will be pared right down to the rind. There will be no India ink at 50¢ and no eight colour paints at 75¢. There will not be enough exercise books to confuse the pupil, and one dictionary will be given to see the pupil through the whole course. All public servants know what departmental economy means. I do not suggest any false economy but as a recent visitor to Alberta, said we need a little more consideration, co-operation and co-ordination.

I leave the issue with your readers in the meantime. If public opinion demands free books for the children they will be supplied free. Legislation does not go one step in advance of the time over comes when the public opinion. Public opinion is formed by education, agitation, and determination. It is also formed by intelligent propaganda and steps will be taken along these lines in the near future.
